What is the M1 fire-safety standard?

The reaction to fire of a material, defined in France by the Decree of 21 November 2002, evaluates its ability to fuel a fire (combustibility and flammability). In establishments open to the public (ERP), curtains, as furnishing materials, must comply with strict standards of reaction to fire. The classification required for these materials is M1, according to the NF P 92-507 standard. This classification, which entitles the holder to a 5-year report, can only be awarded by a French laboratory approved by the Ministry of the Interior. At SOTEXPRO, all fabrics are tested to obtain this mandatory certification.
